

NIER International Symposium on Educational Reform 2017

Measuring the Outcomes of Higher Education

International trends in national surveys of college graduates

To ensure the accountability of government spending for higher education, showing educational outcomes to the public is a common challenge, and in recent years, large-scale surveys of students/alumni are being conducted in countries around the world. In this symposium, we invite guest speakers from the U.K., U.S. and South Korea who have been involved in such projects. We anticipate in-depth discussion about policy outcomes and challenges in implementation based on the experiences of each country.

No attendance fee is required.
